(last updated 5/17/16)

Tips for applying the definitive/ not definitive comma rule:

Identify the element.

In other words, does it answer the question "which one?" If NO, use commas. If YES, leave out the commas.

The state of Utah, which contains many famous national parks, has numerous desert areas.

NOTE: The italicized clause is just added information. It is not needed to answer the question "which Utah?"; thus, the commas are correct.

C. Set off most introductory fragments with a comma.

Introductory elements that should be set off with a comma usually begin with -ing constructions or with clauses that start with words such as after, although, as, because, even though, if, since, and when.

As the sun rose, I ate my breakfast.

Eating my breakfast, I watched the sun rise.

In the distant horizon, the sun rose.

Of course, she ate her breakfast while watching the sunrise.

D. Separate items in a list or series with commas.

Items in a series need to total at least three for this comma rule to apply.	NO COMMAS NEEDED: Toasted bread and grilled onions make for a low budget lunch.
	COMMAS NEEDED: Toasted bread, grilled onions, and Swiss cheese make for a low budget lunch.